Highlights from the Q1'24 AY Industry Insights Report - Publisher Trends, Global Programmatic & Ad Revenue.

1. AY Ad Revenue Index vs. the Stock Market

The S&P 500 witnessed an impressive surge of over 10% during the initial quarter, marking its most significant first-quarter growth since 2019 and reaching numerous record highs while experiencing minimal retracements.

This robust performance of the stock market directly translated into a notable increase in revenue for United States market.

As seen above, the graph demonstrates the normalization of the Standard & Poors [S&P 500], Dow Jones [DJIA], and AY North America Ad Revenue Indexes to a common range.

This aids in visualizing and comparing the stock performance of the 500 largest US companies (S&P 500), and the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) is a stock market index of 30 prominent companies listed on stock exchanges in the United States.

2. Revenue Distribution Breakdown

In North America, optimized Prebid setups typically dominate revenue generation, constituting approximately 65-75% of total earnings. Revenue from ad exchanges and open bidding, when optimized, typically contributes around 20%.

The dynamics differ in Europe, where Google's demand stands out, comprising about 40% of earnings. Amazon's revenue mirrors North American trends. Ideally, Prebid revenue should constitute about half of the total earnings.

With Publishers constantly trying to balance revenue growth with user satisfaction and loyalty, will AI finally resolve this conflict, especially with the ongoing dispute involving #OpenAI?

However, publishers have begun employing more AI in content creation, optimizing revenue and User Lifetime Value, as well as in other aspects.

4. SSPs Trends

An emerging trend since 2023 - we investigated in the 2024 Publisher Trends Report - is the rise of SSPs that solely resell inventory from other SSPs, reflecting consolidation within segments and the emergence of new, smaller companies, resulting in revenue gains.

We bring the Top 5 SSPs by win rate and by comparing their performance in winning auctions and revenue share in a chart that illustrates Prebid demand amongst AY's partners. Get more insights: download the full report.

6. Cookie Deprecation

There's no escaping this year's big story, and the outcome is too risky to call just yet. We're sure the ins

In Q1 alone, Google depreciates cookies on 1% of global Chrome traffic, the Assertive Yield Google Cookie Depreciation and Topics API Impact Report revealed Chrome traffic running the Topics API was experiencing RPMs at up to 45% below cookie levels.

The Competition and Markets Authority in the UK orders Google not to continue with cookie depreciation until its concerns are resolved as Publishers continued to express their discontent with the performance of their depreciated inventory.

Sure, Q1 was a tough ride for the cookie deprecation, and with #Facebook and #Instagram willing to pay for subscriptions (at least in Europe so far), what does this mean for the ad industry? “Pay or Okay”? Read the complete report to learn more.

7. IAB Tech Lab's Video Recategorization

As we step into Q2, we're on the verge of fully understanding the effects of the IAB Tech Lab's updates on Outstream video.

These changes were first introduced in 2022 and refined in 2023, and they resulted in big changes for publishers using third-party video player plugins, as they may have seen a drop in CPMs for this type of inventory.

Outstream video is a thing of the past, replaced by three new categories: Accompanying Content, Interstitial, and No Content / Standalone.

Previously, some Outstream content, especially what's now called "Accompanying Content," could fetch high CPMs as Premium Video, despite lower viewability and engagement compared to a 'YouTube-like' experience.

These revisions offer clearer guidelines for buying and selling video content, giving buyers better insight into their investments. For publishers, it's time to rethink video strategies.

Adaptation is key in this evolving landscape, whether creating more premium video environments or adjusting to new revenue streams. To deep-dive into this analysis, download the complete report.

As we delved deeper into Q1'24, it became evident that optimization and adaptation are key to maximizing revenue potential and enhancing user experiences.
